State of Weather and Indications. The weather indications to-day are for

The following conditions prevailed in different parts of the country yesterday, as outlined by the local weather bureau: The barometer pressure is highest over the Lake region and New England States, and lowest in the South Atlantic States and along the eastern slope of the Rockies.

The temperature has fallen slightly in the Central valleys, Middle Atlantic and New England States and remained about stationary elsewhere. The weather is cloudy in the Missouri Valley, and on the Atlantic coast north of Virginia; elsewhere it is clear to fair. Rain has fallen along the Atlantic coast and at scattered points elsewhere. A storm area has developed in the South Atlantic States, which will probable to the second of bly cause showers and continued warm weather in this vicinity to-day.

TO COMPLETE THE LIST TO-DAY. Only the Renders and Histories Remain to Be Selected.

The State Board of Education was in session pretty much all day yesterday, American artillery fire seemed to be diand to-day the work, which has for nearly two weeks engaged the attention of the officials constituting this board, will be concluded, and the list of books adopted for use in the public schools of Virginia for the next four years will be made public this evening.

Much progress was made on the High Much progress was made on the High School list yesterday, all of the common school books having been agreed upon, with the exception of readers and histo-ries. There will, it is said, be a good many changes in the list of books now to use. The list will be somewhat longer, too, but the changes will not be so numer ous as to entail any very great expense upon the people. The board feels that it is necessary to rid the schools of Virginia of antiquated literature, which has been in use in the school-rooms for a number of years, and it will substitute for these ks some choice ones.

CHANGES THAT ARE PROBABLE. No one who is in a position to know will say just what books will be stricken off the list or what books will be substituted, but it became known some days ago that the teachers all over the State were clamoring for a change of grammars, and it is said that Harvey's grammar has un-doubtedly been stricken off. McGuffey's doubtedly been stricken off. McGuffey's readers will also go by the board, it is said, though no definite information to this effect can be secured. The board, it is asserted, will undoubtedly adopt Mrs. Lee's history of the United States, and it is thought by many that John Fiske's history will also be selected. One or two other histories may be put on, but none of those now in use are likely to be re-

THE FORMER JANITOR ARRESTED Beasley Charged With Taking an Umbrella-His Denial.

Saturday employed as a janitor at the city, was arrested yesterday morning by Sergeant A. M. Tomiinson, charged with stealing an umbrella from the assistant general secretary of that institution. Beasley, who was locked up at the Second Police Station and will appear be-fore Justice Crutchfield this morning, de-nies the charge, and says he will show his innocence when the case is called. He is a man of about 25 years, a native of Petersburg, and well connected. He had been employed at the Young Men's Christian Association about two weeks, when released by the general secretary on last Saturday.

Y. M. C. A. ENTERED. The Young Men's Christian Association was entered early yesterday morning and an umbrella, a shirt, and about 25 cents in money were stolen. The change was gotten from one of the cash drawers. An attempt was made to break the other, but-this fell through. The entrance to the building was gained from the reary A. pane in a rear window had been broken, and whoever got in did so by reaching in the broken place and unfastening in the broken place and unfastening the window latch. The upper sash was pulled down and the intruder climbed in, landing in the gailery of the gymnasium.

Beasley came to Richmond about three weeks ago, bearing most excellent recommendations from the general secretary of the New York Young Men's Christian Association, where he had been employed for two years. His letter was exceptionally commendatory, and as Secretary McKee needed a janitor the stranger was given this position. He was engaged for a fortnight, and released at the end of that time.

He is a bright-looking, intelligent youn man, who appears to have seen a good deal of life in its many and in some of its rougher phases. He declares his inno-cence, and had last night when he talked cence, and had last night when he tailed with a representative of the Dispatch an abiding faith that he would "come out all right." He seemed not to care so much for himself, but was particularly grieved on account of his unfortunate scrape for his people's and especially his mother's

HOW THE ARREST WAS MADE. When Secretary McKee found yester-day morning that the Young Men's Chris-tian Association had been entered he sent for Sergeant Tomilinson and told him all he knew, and left the matter in the hands of the officer. Sergeant Tomlinson sought out Beasley, from the evidence in his possession, and, finding him at the Union depot, placed him under arrest. Beasley said to the Dispatch man that the umbrella found in his possession was his property, and that he brought it here from New York with him.

TORAL'S REASONS FOR SURRENDER

Judged Our Troops by Cuban Standards-Surprised at Their Daring. Santiago Correspondence New York Her-(ald.)

General Linares and General Toral since the fall of Santiago persistently have declined to express their views of the campaign which has just resulted in the capitulation of the city and the surrender of their army.

Several attempts have been made to interview each of the Spanish generals, but both have refused to talk for publi-cation. General Shafter issued strict orders that their wish should be respected.

I am able, however, to send a correct statement of the Spanish situation here just prior to the surrender, showing the reasons which prompted General Toral to capitulate. These facts I obtained from the Spanish judge advocate-general for this military division, who was familiar with the situation smong the Spaniards throughout the campaign. "I confess," said he, "that we did not expect Santiago could be taken. We were misinformed regarding the strength of the American military forces. We did not think General Shafter could send a sufficient force against the city to just prior to the surrender, showing the

"The greatest confidence existed among occupied at El Caney and San Juan could not be successfully assailed. Conse-quently, when the American troops carried both of those places by assault we began to realize that we would not be able successfully to defend the city. "We had practically no field artillery, and our inability to repulse the Americans either at San Juan or El Caney

> TOO LATE TO RETREAT. "When it developed later on that evac-uation was the only course by which we could hope to save the garrison, it found that we were too late. The American lines by that time had been extend-ed so that our only avenue of retreat was cut off. "General Linares, although wounded in the fighting before the city, violently opposed the proposition to evacuate, as he also did the proposition to capitulate. "But General Toral realized that we must succumb to the inevitable. I have no doubt that General Toral bravely would have continued the fight, but he knew that it would mean only a needless sacrifice of thousands of lives." I asked the Judge Advocate-General about the effect of the American bombardment of Santiago. He replied:

"Little damage was done in the city by the American artillery. Only a few shells struck in the city proper. rected at our batteries and trenches. Two large shells, which we supposed were thrown by the fleet, exploded in the heart of the city and created great terror among the non-combatants.

scarcity of food in Santiago, but after our land supply had been cut off the city must have been starved into sur-render within a few weeks. My family had been living chiefly on rice for the last week before capitulation. Even General Linares and General Toral were no better supplied. We occasionally had a little meat, but it was tough, and what "Many horses shot in battle were eaten

General Linares and General Toral both intend to return to Spain as soon as pos-sible. General Linares still is disabled by his wound, and may not be in con-dition to return for a month. General Toral, however, will go back on one of the transports which will carry the defeated army to Spain. Neither general has any choice. Under the terms of surrender they must return with their

This, I learn is entirely agreeable to both generals. Each has had enough service in Cuba, and will be glad of the opportunity to return to Spain.

SPANIARDS WERE AMAZED. Spanish officers in Santiago evinced great curiosity for further details about the destruction of Admiral Cervera's fleet. When they were informed that but one American was killed in the en-gagement they held up their hands in Saturday employed as a janitor at the anazement. They thought that must Young Men's Christian Association, of this baye been impossible, as they had heard firing for half an hour after the Span-ish fleet dashed out of the harbor.

From their conversation it is apparent that the Spaniards entertained the hope that Cervera would defeat the American fleet and raise the blockade at Habana.

They were not officially informed of the destruction of the fleet until more than a week after the event had taken place. News was spread among the troops on the day Admiral Cervera sail ed that his fleet had sunk several Amer-ican ships and had steamed away to the westward. When the real news came all
